

{loadposition sort}

I have always been an advocate of free and fair markets. Market competition is the only way to create wealth and jobs in the economy. When the government attempts to create winners and losers, we find the American people getting the short end of the stick.

I am skeptical of the notion that protectionist policies are in the country's best interest. The American workforce is among the strongest and most able in the world. When the government grants special privileges to big interest groups, it hurts the American workers. I support trade policies that are fair and balanced and help our workers compete on a level playing field.

{loadposition related}